15.1 CONQUEST IN THE AMERICAS

A) First Encounters in the Americas

- Meeting the Taínos
 - Columbus encountered the Taíno people when he first arrived in the West Indies
 - Taínos were open and friendly toward the Spanish
 - Taínos were “generous with what they have, to such a degree as no one would believe but he who had seen it.”
 - Taínos offended the Spanish when they failed to respect the Christian symbol properly
 - Columbus felt that he was superior to the Taínos and could decide their fate
 - Columbus claimed the land for Spain
 - Columbus took several Taínos as prisoners to take back to the Spanish king
 - Columbus’s encounter was repeated by a wave of Spanish conquistadors who soon arrived in the Americas
 - Conquistadors: conquerors
 - They first settled on the lands of Hispaniola, Cuba, and Puerto Rico
 - They seized the Native Americans’ gold ornaments
 - Made them pan for more gold

- Forced the Native Americans to convert to Christianity
- Guns, Horses, and Disease
 - Spanish guns and cannons were superior to the Native Americans' arrows and spears
 - European metal armour provided the Spanish with better protection
 - The Spanish had horses
 - Useful in battles
 - Carrying supplies
 - Frightened the Native Americans because they had never seen a horse
 - Disease helped the conquistadors take control of the Taínos and other Native Americans
 - Europeans carried diseases that Native Americans had no immunity to
 - Smallpox
 - Measles
 - Influenza
 - The diseases spread rapidly and wiped out villages
 - The Native American population declined by 90% in the 1500s

B) Cortés Conquers Mexico

- Cortés advances on the Aztecs
 - Hernán Cortés
 - One of the earliest conquistadors
 - A landowner in Cuba
 - Heard of Spanish expeditions that had been repelled by Indians
 - Believed that he could succeed where none had before
 - 1519, landed on the coast of Mexico
 - Began an inland trek toward Tenochtitlán

- Tenochtitlán: the capital of the Aztec empire
- Malinche
 - Young Indian women
 - Served as Cortés's translator and advisor
 - Knew both the Maya and Aztec languages
 - Learned Spanish quickly
 - Told Cortés that the Aztecs had gained power by conquering other groups of people
 - The Aztecs sacrificed thousands of their captives to the Aztec gods each year
 - Conquered people hated their Aztec overlords
 - Malinche helped Cortés arrange alliances with them
- Conquered people agreed to help Cortés fight the Aztecs
- Moctezuma faces a dilemma
 - Moctezuma
 - Aztec emperor
 - Wondered if the leader was Quetzalcoatl
 - Quetzalcoatl: an Aztec god-king who had long ago vowed to return from the east
 - Did not know how to respond to the arrival of Cortés because he wasn't sure if Cortés was a god
 - Sent gifts with religious importance
 - Urged the strangers not to continue to Tenochtitlán
 - Cortés was not interested in Aztec religious objects, but was extremely interested in the gold and silver ornaments that Moctezuma sent him
 - Cortés became more determined than ever to reach Tenochtitlán

- Tenochtitlan falls to the Spanish
 - The Spanish scorned the Aztecs' religion and sought to convert them to Christianity
 - The Spanish saw more of the Aztec treasure in Tenochtitlan, so they decided to imprison Motezuma so they could gain control of the Aztecs and their riches
 - Cortés compelled Moctezuma to sign over his land and treasure to the Spanish
 - A new force of Spanish conquistadors had arrived on the coast to challenge Cortés
 - Various groups of Spanish, Aztecs, and Native Americans all fought for control
 - The Aztecs drove the Spanish from the city
 - More than half of the Spanish were killed in the fighting
 - Moctezuma was killed in the fighting
 - Cortés retreated to plan an assault
 - Cortés captured and demolished Tenochtitlán
 - The Spanish later built Mexico City on the ruins of Tenochtitlán

C) Pizarro Takes Peru

- Cortés's success inspired other adventurers
- Francisco Pizarro
 - Interested in Peru's Inca empire, which was reputed to have even more riches than the Aztecs
 - Arrived in Peru just after the Incan ruler Atahualpa had won the throne from his brother in a bloody civil war
- Atahualpa refused to become a Spanish vassal or convert to Christianity
- Pizarro captured Atahualpa and slaughtered thousands of Incas with the aid of Indian allies
- The Spanish demanded a huge ransom for the ruler
 - The Inca paid it
 - Atahualpa was still killed by the Spanish

- Pizarro and his followers overran the Incan heartland
 - He had superior weapons
 - The Incas were weakened by European diseases
- Spanish forces surged across Ecuador and Chile
- Pizarro was killed by a rival Spanish faction a few years after he established the city of Lima

D) Effects of the Spanish Conquistadors

- The Spanish Victory
 - A few hundred European soldiers had conquered millions of Native Americans
 - Seized huge quantities of valuable goods
 - Had used Native American labour to establish silver mines in Peru and Mexico to finance their new empire
 - Treasure fleets sailed each year to Spain from the Spanish Philippines, loaded with gold and silver
 - Spain became Europe's greatest power
- Effects on Native Americans
 - Believed that the disasters they suffered marked the world's end
 - Survivors from diseases felt that their gods were less powerful than the god of their conquerors
 - Many Native Americans converted to Christianity in the hopes that their suffering would end
- Effects on Indians
 - Continued to resist the Spanish in any way they could
 - The Maya fought Spanish rule in Mexico and Central America
 - Revolts erupted among the Inca
 - Indians resisted European influences by preserving aspects of their own culture

- Native American culture came to influence the culture of Latin America

15.2 SPANISH AND PORTUGUESE COLONIES IN THE AMERICAS

A) Ruling the Spanish Empire

- Spain claimed a vast empire stretching from California to South America
- Spain divided these lands into four provinces, including New Spain and Peru
- Governing the provinces
 - Spain was determined to maintain strict control over its empire
 - The king set up the Council of the Indies
 - To pass laws for the colonies
 - Closely monitored the colonial officials to make sure they did not assume too much authority
 - Appointed viceroys
 - Viceroy: representatives who rule in his name in each province
 - Lesser officials and audiencias helped the viceroy rule
 - Audiencias: advisory councils of Spanish settlers
- Spreading Christianity
 - To Spain, winning souls for Christianity was as important as gaining land
 - The Catholic Church worked with the government to convert Native Americans to Christianity
 - Church leaders often served as royal officials and helped to regulate the activities of Spanish settlers
 - As Spain's American empire expanded, Church authority expanded along with it
 - Missionaries
 - Baptised thousands of Native Americans

- Built mission churches
 - Worked to turn new converts into loyal subjects of the Catholic king of Spain
 - Introduces European clothing
 - Introduced the Spanish language
 - Introduces new crafts such as carpentry and locksmithing
 - Forcibly imposed European culture over Native American culture
- Controlling Trade
 - To make the empire profitable
 - The most valuable resources shipped from Spanish America to Spain were silver and gold
 - Colonists could export raw materials only to Spain and could buy only Spanish-manufactured goods
 - Laws forbade colonists from trading with other European nations or even with other Spanish colonies
 - Sugarcane became profitable
 - Had to be grown on plantations
 - Large estates run by an owner or the owner's overseer
 - Plantation needed large numbers of workers to be profitable
- Encomienda – A System of Forced Labour
 - Spanish monarchs granted the conquistadors encomiendas
 - Encomiendas: the right to demand labour to tribute from Native Americans in a particular area
 - The conquistadors used this system to force Native Americans to work under the most brutal conditions
 - Those who resisted were hunted down and killed

- Disease, starvation, and cruel treatment caused drastic declines in the Native American population
- Used in the mines as well as on plantations
 - Tons of silver from the Potosí region of Peru and Bolivia filled Spanish treasure ships
 - Native Americans were forced to extract the rich ore from dangerous shafts deep inside the Andes Mountains
 - Thousands of Indians die from the terrible conditions
- A Spanish Priest Speaks Out
 - Bartolomé de Las Casas
 - Condemned the evils of the encomienda system
 - Las Casas detailed the horrors that Spanish rule had brought to Native Americans
 - Pleaded with the king to end the abuse
 - Spain passed the New Laws of the Indies in 1542
 - The Laws forbade enslavement and abuse of Native Americans
 - Many Native Americans were forced to become peons
 - Peons: workers forced to labour for a landlord in order to pay off a debt
 - Landlords advanced workers with food, tools, or seed, creating debts that workers could never pay off in their lifetime
- Bringing Workers From Africa
 - Las Casas urged colonists to import workers from Africa
 - He believed that Africans were immune to tropical diseases and had skills in farming, mining, and metalworking
 - Furthered the brutal African slave trade
 - The demand for sugar products skyrocketed

- Millions of Africans were imported
 - Forced to work as field hands, miners, or servants
 - Became artists, artisans, and mechanics
- Some Africans earned enough money to buy their freedom
- Some rebelled or ran away

B) Colonial Society and Culture

- Cultural Blending
 - Settlers learned Native American styles of building
 - Ate American food
 - Travelled in Indian-style canoes
 - Indian artistic styles influenced the newcomers
 - Europeans
 - Taught their religion to Native Americans
 - Introduced animals -> transformed the lives of many Native Americans
 - Africans
 - Introduced their farming methods
 - Cooking styles
 - Crops
 - Drama
 - Dance
 - Songs
- A Layered Society
 - Peninsulares
 - At the top of the social classes
 - Peninsulares: people born in Spain

- Peninsular referred to the Iberian Peninsula
 - Filled the highest positions in both colonial governments and the Catholic Church
- Creoles
 - Creoles: American-born descendants of Spanish settlers
 - Owned most of the plantations, ranches, and mines
- Mestizos
 - Mestizos: people of Native American and European descent
- Mulattoes
 - Mulattoes: people of African and European descent
- American and African descendants were in the lowest social classes
- Lively Towns and Cities
 - Spanish settlers generally live in towns and cities
 - The population of Mexico City grew so quickly that it became the largest Spanish-speaking city by the 1550s
 - Colonial cities
 - Centres of government, commerce, and European culture
 - Around the central plaza stood government buildings and a Spanish-style church
 - Broad avenues and public monuments symbolised European power and wealth
 - Cities were also centres of intellectual and cultural life
 - Architecture, paintings, poetry, and the exchange of ideas flourished in Spanish cities in the Americas
- Emphasising Education
 - Colonies built universities
 - The University of Mexico was established as early as 1551
 - Women wishing for an education might enter a convent

- Sor Juana Inés de la Cruz was refused admission to the University of Mexico because she was a girl
- She entered a convent and devoted herself to study and the writing of poetry
 - Earned a reputation of being one of the greatest poets ever to write in the Spanish language

C) The Portuguese Colony in Brazil

- Settling Brazil
 - Tupian Indians
 - Native Americans who lived in Brazil
 - Largely wiped out by disease
 - Portugal issued grants of land to Portuguese nobles, who agreed to develop the land and share profits with the crown
 - Landowners sent settlers to build towns, plantations, and churches
 - Brazil offered no instant wealth from silver or gold
 - Early settlers cut and exported brazilwood
 - The Portuguese forced Indians and Africans to clear land for plantations
- Challenging Portugal and Spain
 - The wealth of the Americas helped make Spain the most powerful country in Europe
 - English and Dutch were jealous and shared the resentment that French king Francis I felt when he declared, “I should like to see Adam’s will, wherein he divided the Earth between Spain and Portugal.”
 - To get around those countries' strict control over colonial trade, smugglers traded illegally with Portuguese and Spanish colonists
 - In the Caribbean and elsewhere, Dutch, English, and French pirates preyed on treasure ships from the Americas

- Some pirates, called privateers, even operated with the approval of European governments
 - Privateers: pirates
- Other European explorers continued to sail the coasts of the Americas, hunting for gold and other treasure, as well as a northwest passage to Asia

15.3 Effects of Global Contact

I. The Columbian Exchange

1. After Christopher Columbus first discovered the Americas, he initiated trade between Western Europe, also known as the Old World, and the Americas, also known as the New World. This exchange process was later called the Columbian Exchange.

B. New Foods and Animals

1. The American foods tomatoes and corn satisfied the needs on food in the highly populated Europe. Soon it spreads even further, becomes an important crop worldwide.
2. European also carried crops to the Americas. For example, Europe brought grape and wheat, Africa and Asia had banana and sugar cane.
3. Cattles, pigs, goats, and chickens were brought to the Americas. Animals improve local Americans with a better diet, while the horses and donkeys allowed the Americans to transport and hunt easily.

C. The Global Population Explodes

1. The American crops allowed the European population to increase by the 1700s.
2. The Columbian Exchange also allowed millions of people to migrate from Europe to the Americas through boats.
3. Atlantic slave trade forcibly brought millions of Africans to the Americas.

4. For the Native American population, it decreased, since they had no immunity toward European diseases, for example, smallpox and measles.

II. A Commercial Revolution

A. The Price Revolution Strikes

1. During the 1500s, prices in European market started to rise. Too much money were in circulation, caused severe inflation.
2. The inflation was triggered by the enormous amount of silver and gold flowing into Europe from the Americas by the mid-1500s.
3. This period is known as the price revolution.

B. Capitalism Emerges

1. Expanded trades allowed the growth of European capitalism.
2. Entrepreneurs are critical to the success of capitalism.

C. Exploring New Business Methods

1. Banks increased in importance, allowing wealthy merchants to lend money at interest.

D. Bypassing the Guilds

1. Capitalists bypassed the guilds using “putting-out” system. It was first used to produce textiles but later spread to other industries.
2. This system separated capital and labor for the first time, and it divides the work from raw material to the final product into different phases and different factories.

III. Mercantilism Arises

1. Mercantilism: Strengthen national economies. Believe that a nation’s real wealth was measured in its gold and silver treasure. A nation must export more goods than it imported.

B. The Role of Colonies

1. Mercantilism aimed to gain benefits from the colonies, thus, European powers passed strict laws regulating trade with their colonies. Colonists could not set up their own industries to manufacture goods.

C. Increasing National Wealth

1. Tariffs: Taxes on imported goods, designed to protect local industries from foreign competition by increasing the price of imported goods.

13.3 The Protestant Reformation

I. Background to the Reformation

1. In renaissance Italy, wealth was not distributed equally.

B. Church Abuses

1. Popes competed with Italian Princes for political power.
2. Protected Papal states from threats of the secular states.
3. Church fought for power in their own interests.
4. Clergies sold indulgences to finance the artwork for the churches.
 - a. Indulgence was a lessening of the time a soul would have to spend in purgatory, a place where souls too impure to enter heaven atoned for sins committed during their lifetimes.
5. Such practice stressed Bible study.

C. Early Revolts Against the Church

1. In England in the 1300s, John Wycliffe launched a systematic attack against the Church, called for a change.
2. Jan Hus, born 40 years after Wycliffe, led a reform movement for which he was executed.

II. Martin Luther: Catalyst of Change

1. In 1517, protests erupted into a full-scale revolt. It was triggered by a German monk and professor of theology named Martin Luther.

B. Writing the 95 Theses

1. In 1517, Johann Tetzel collected indulgences, which outraged Luther. Luther soon drew 95 theses against indulgences.

C. Igniting a Firestorm

1. Overnight, copies of 95 theses were printed and distributed across Europe, and stirred furious debate.
2. Luther fought against the church and developed new doctrines.
3. In 1521, Pope Leo X excommunicated Luther.
4. The new Holy Roman emperor Charles V, summoned Luther to the diet at the city of Worms.
5. Emperor ordered Luther to give up his protest. He again refused.
6. Emperor declared Luther an outlaw, making it a crime for anyone to give him food or shelter.
7. Still, Luther had a large amount of followers that support his arguments.
